

AG&P to continue supporting aspiring university students in social entrepreneurship to create a better world

Manila, Monday, July 10, 2017 - AG&P (Atlantic Gulf & Pacific Company of Manila, Inc.) has delivered on its promise to support university students across the Philippines in creating a better world through social entrepreneurial action by extending its sponsorship for the Philippines Chapter of Enactus, an international non-profit organization dedicated to changing the world through community-based action by young students.

AG&P became a diamond sponsor of Enactus in 2016 and pledged further support in 2017 because it believes the non-profit organization's ideals of encouraging innovation and entrepreneurialism are closely aligned to its own.

"AG&P has been continuously supporting the communities where we operate for more than 117 years and as part of our efforts, we are providing technical training for youth who have limited access to education but have so much potential," said Anupam Ahuja, AG&P SVP for Strategic Services.

"We are honored to partner with Enactus in its mission to empower young, aspiring Filipinos who want to make a change in their local communities. We look forward to seeing their projects create impact and encourage more young people to engage in social entrepreneurship," she added.

On July 8, 2017, AG&P was one of 37 judges who selected Holy Trinity College of General Santos City to represent the Philippines in the 2017 Enactus World Cup in London in September, where students from all over the world will present their ideas for changing the world, starting with their own community. Other winning universities were Sultan Kudarat State University – Access Campus (1st Runner Up), Sultan Kudarat State University – Isulan Campus (2nd Runner Up) and Nueva Vizcaya State University (3rd Runner Up).

AG&P has a long and proud history of supporting the communities where we operate. For over a century, the company has been giving back through a wide range of community initiatives including medical programs, disaster relief and creating world-class employment opportunities for young, aspiring Filipinos.
